Participating in APCTP Programs

Topical Research Program :

- A major program involving some of the Korean physics communities and groups connected to international counterparts.
- It consists of a set of lectures and/or workshops and schools on specialized research topics.
- It may be broad with the community-led activities and dispersed in time ranging from one month up to six months.

Conferences/Workshops :

- Support conferences and workshops held at APCTP.
- The applications from the member countries of the Center are strongly encouraged.
- It is advised to invite at least one Korean scientist or the center academic coordinator as a member of the organizing committee for better local support and coordination.

Focus Program :

- A major program intended to draw a small group of active international researchers to the Center in a sharply focused field of utmost interest in physics and related area.
- In comparison with Topical Programs, more concentrated and residential during two weeks or one month.
- It may include a set of lectures and/or mini-workshops on specialized research topics.

External Activity :

- Support academic activities in member countries.
- This may be used to encourage active participation from other member countries.
- If selected, the center academic coordinator will be assigned and help to organize the activity according to the APCTP guidelines.

Joint Activity :

The Center holds Joint Activity with institutions under cooperation agreements. The Joint activities are currently carried out in cooperation with ICTP and ECT^{*} in Italy, PIMS and TPI in Canada, MPI-PKS in Germany, JINR in Russia, and RIKEN, KEK, YITP in Japan and more. The Joint Activity can be held at the Center or at cooperating institutions depending on the circumstances.

AP Scholars for Joint Research :

In order to train science leaders for the next generation and perform joint research, we invite established scholars in Asia Pacific for an extended period as an APCTP faculty or an adjunct faculty. This program is expected to strengthen the resident research groups at the Center.

Young Scientist Training Programs :

- A new program intended to train young scientists in theoretical physics in the Asia-Pacific region.
- At the postdoctoral level, an appointment for one year, renewable for one or two more years.
- The applications from the member countries of the Center, in particular, the South Asian Countries are strongly encouraged.

Visitor Programs :

The Center strongly encourages from short to long-term visits by researchers or small research groups from the Asia-Pacific region. In particular, young scientists from the South-East Asia are strongly encouraged to apply in connection with the academic programs at the Center.

Scientist Network program for Science Communication :

The Center carries out diverse activities for communicating science to the general public, exploiting the network of center scientists. The web journal that is accessible to laymen readers is published and distributed on-line in multi-lingual forms. The Center scientists and its extensive community offer public lectures and diverse science communication activities.
